Thousands protest Trump in 'No Kings' rally at Statehouse

Wire report

Thousands of Kansans rallied Saturday at the Statehouse in Topeka as part of a nationwide backlash to President Donald Trump, hoisting signs, joining in pro-democracy chants and speaking out against immigration raids.

Organizers for the "No Kings" rally repeatedly urged the crowd to remain peaceful as demonstrators filled the south lawn of the Statehouse grounds. A lively contingent on the edge of the rally shouted insults at a small pro-Trump gathering across the street, but the event was otherwise peaceful.

The rally featured speeches from advocates and candidates for office, including Kansas Sen. Cindy Holscher, an Overland Park Democrat who announced she is running for governor, and Christy Davis, a former federal rural development official who revealed she is exploring a run for U.S. Senate.

The crowd sang the national anthem and recited the Pledge of Allegiance, ending with an emphatic "for all."

And the crowd cheered when Melissa Stiehler and Davis Hammet, prominent advocates for voting and LGBTQ+ rights, made a surprise brief appearance in formal wedding attire before leaving to get married elsewhere in town.

The Topeka rally was among protests all over the country to oppose the president's plan for a military display in Washington, D.C., on his own birthday, as well as mass immigration arrests. Organizers said more than 5,000 people joined in the Topeka rally. Other rallies were held elsewhere in Kansas.

Lee Boyd, of Lawrence, said she rushed back from an unrelated event in Kalamazoo, Michigan, so she could get to the Topeka rally in time.

She grabbed a seat in the flower garden on the south lawn, holding a small sign that read, "Tax the rich."

"I feel pretty strongly about this dictatorship that we're under, and I also am quite concerned about the defunding of National Public Radio and PBS," Boyd said.

Describing himself as an old hippie, Alan Schmidt, of Hoyt, sported a tie-dyed shirt and carried an upside down American flag.

"Our nation is in distress, and I want to be part of the voice that says this is not OK," Schmidt said.

Schmidt was one of several people to display an upside-down flag, which caught the attention of the handful of men carrying pro-Trump signs across the street on the south edge of the rally. The men refused to provide their full names.

"I've never seen so many ignorant people in my life," said a man who would only identify himself as Jeff. "Every one of those signs, there's no facts at all on them. None. Period."

inches of rain could fall in the area.

He said forecasters believe the strongest chance for storms will be between 10 p.m. and 4 a.m.

Rain chances are expected to end Wednesday morning.

Dryer conditions are expected for the remainder of the week in Leavenworth, according to the National Weather Service.

Temperatures are expected to reach the mid 90s by Friday, and the warmer temperatures are expected to continue through the weekend.

Recent heavy rains have helped improve drought conditions in Leavenworth County.

An updated map released by the U.S. Drought Monitor on Thursday indicated that only 0.51% of Leavenworth County is considered abnormally dry. The rest of the county is not experiencing any drought conditions.

A week earlier, more than 18% of the county was considered abnormally dry.
